About the GRI Report 2016

Since the birth of the industry with the Sino-British Joint Declaration of 1984 (which culminated in the handing over of Hong Kong to China), much has changed in the world of Global Residence & Citizenship. Third-world countries have had prolonged periods of growth, and first-world countries have had fertility rates below replacement levels. In other words, both demand and supply has grown. In Canada, we've seen people who appeared to be regular housewives with ties back home earn eight figures in less than a decade by becoming immigration consultants. But the industry has yet to mature. Countries like Australia and Canada have opened their doors to business migrants but, like others, have failed to correctly capitalize on their full potential. Irrational demands and lack of business understanding have limited the economic impact of business migrants, with governments often putting the blame on the consultants or the immigrants themselves. Unlocking that potential would usher in a boom in demand for sound business minds around the globe and turn global residence into a major industry: the trade of top performers. We believe this maturity is only a decade or two away, so it's important for industry players to position themselves accordingly. Maturity would turn small businesses into mid-size companies, and mid-size companies into corporations: the transition from back street to main street. Much of the business involves educating the population about the benefits of relocation – what it can do for their family, their business or their wealth – whether that relocation is partial or full. The objective of this annual report is to update you on what's been happening in the industry, enlighten you about new opportunities and ultimately help you grow your business.

WHAT WE DO

Since 2010, we have conducted research on most of the world's business immigration schemes and built city- and country-based indexes tailored to HNWIs. Our main expertise is working with governments to optimize their business immigration programs, both pre-landing and post-landing. We take a mid- to long-term perspective on the economic impacts of immigration on business growth, export, education and the property market.

We also cater to you, the industry professional: we can help grow your business. If you're working a specific program, we can help you identify markets where your product will sell better and grow your revenues. If you're an immigration consultant with strong links to a certain market, we can help you establish which programs and countries offer a good match for your client and financial growth for you. If you're a wealth-management or tax firm, we can help you figure out the best place for your clients to relocate, based on their specific needs.

Millionaires Maps

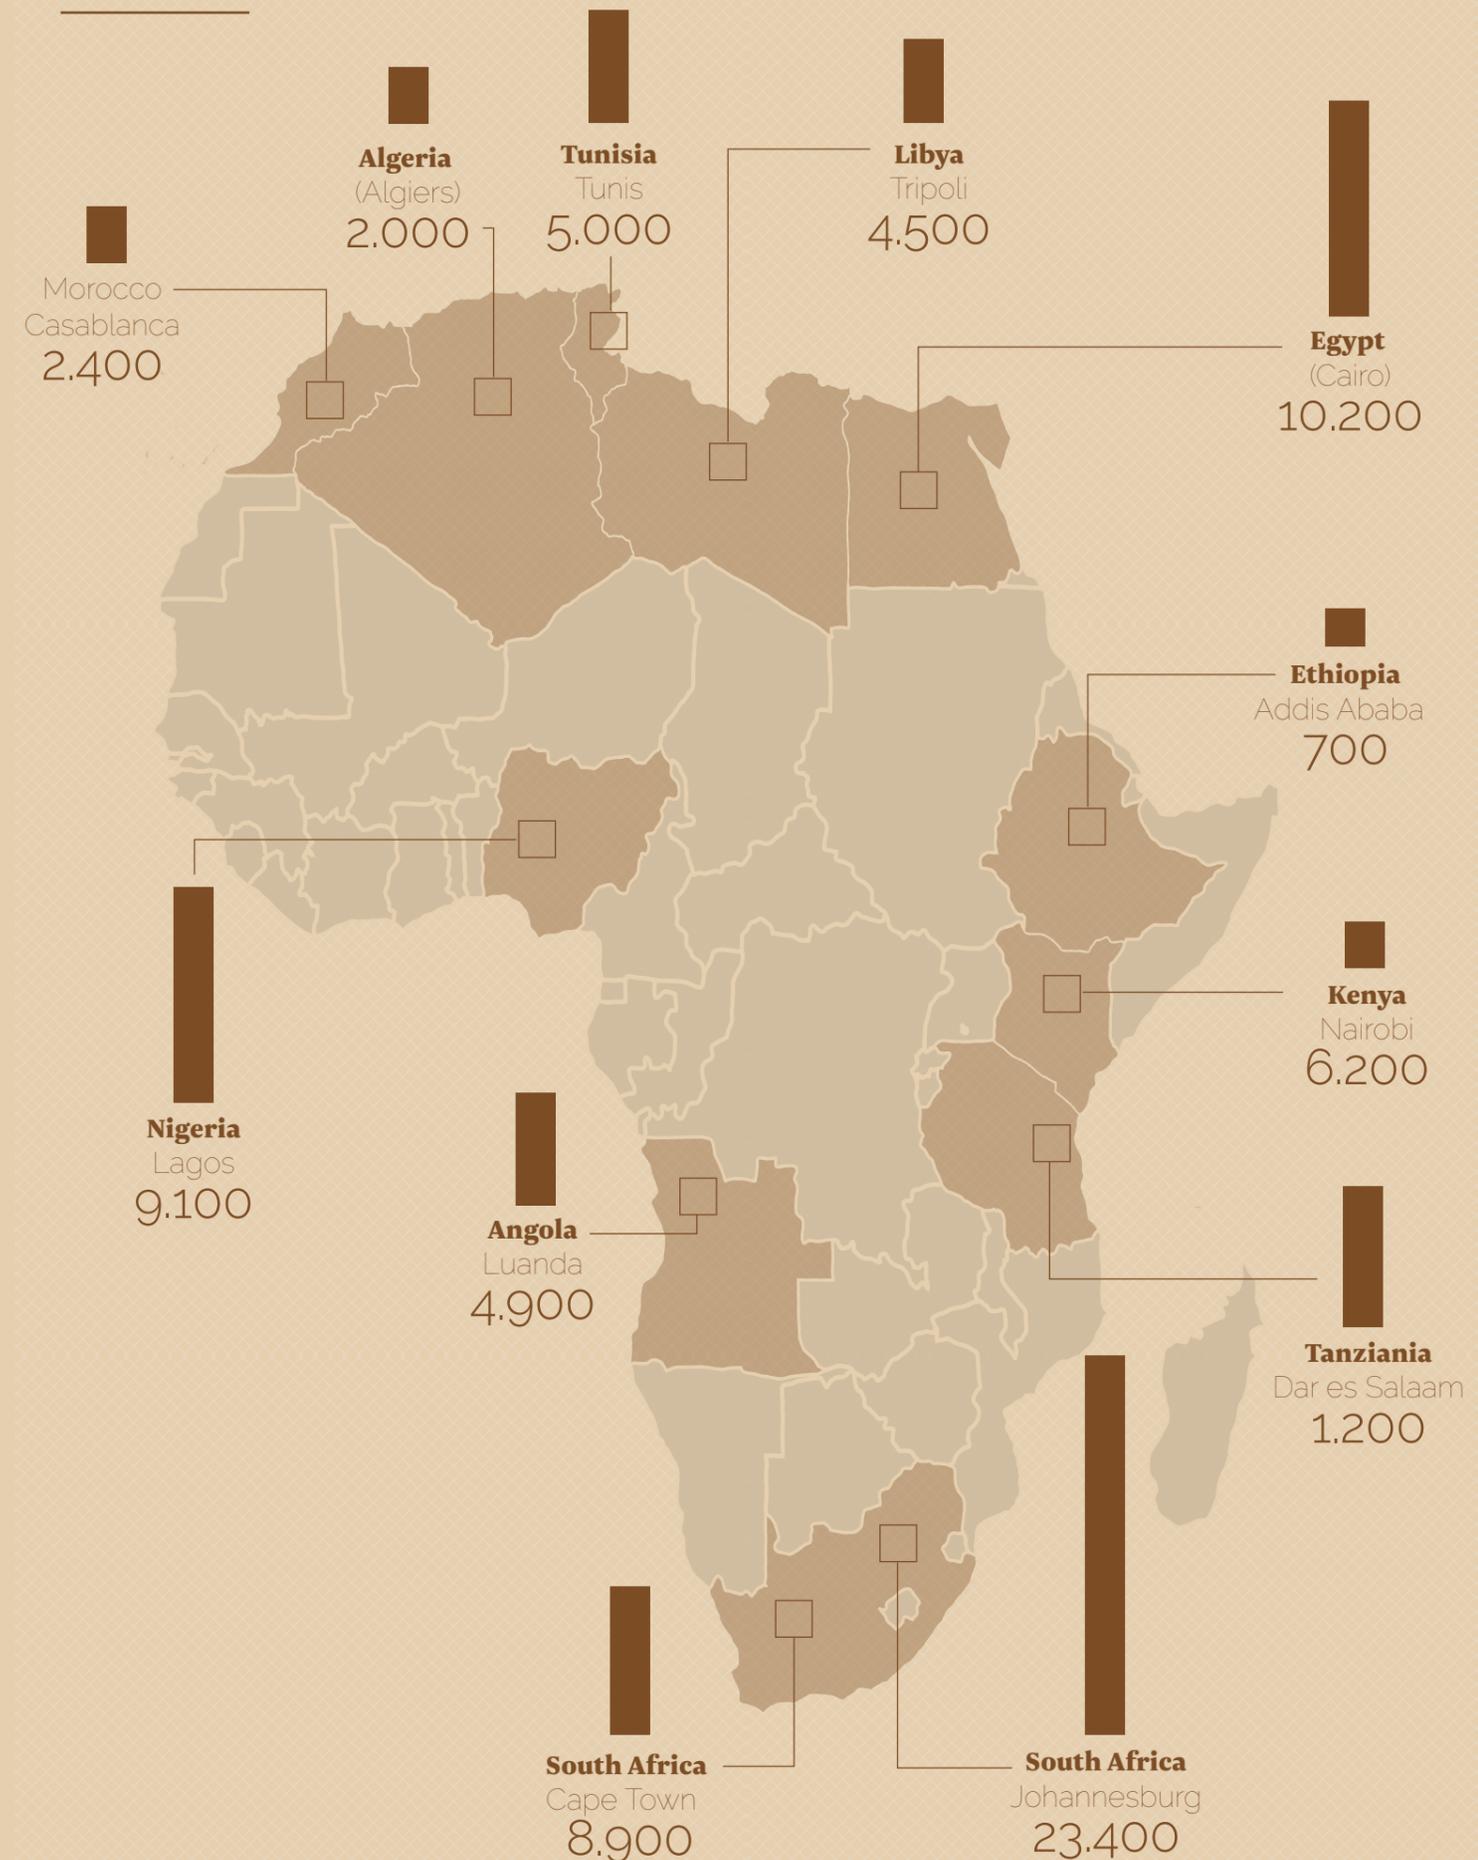

HNWI MARKET

The market is growing every year as a result of the economic development of nations. We have estimated the number of millionaires in some of the world's major main cities, and not all of these people have big incentives to relocate. In Singapore, perhaps only a small percentage of the millionaire population will seek to relocate, whereas in Karachi a larger percentage may be open to moving.

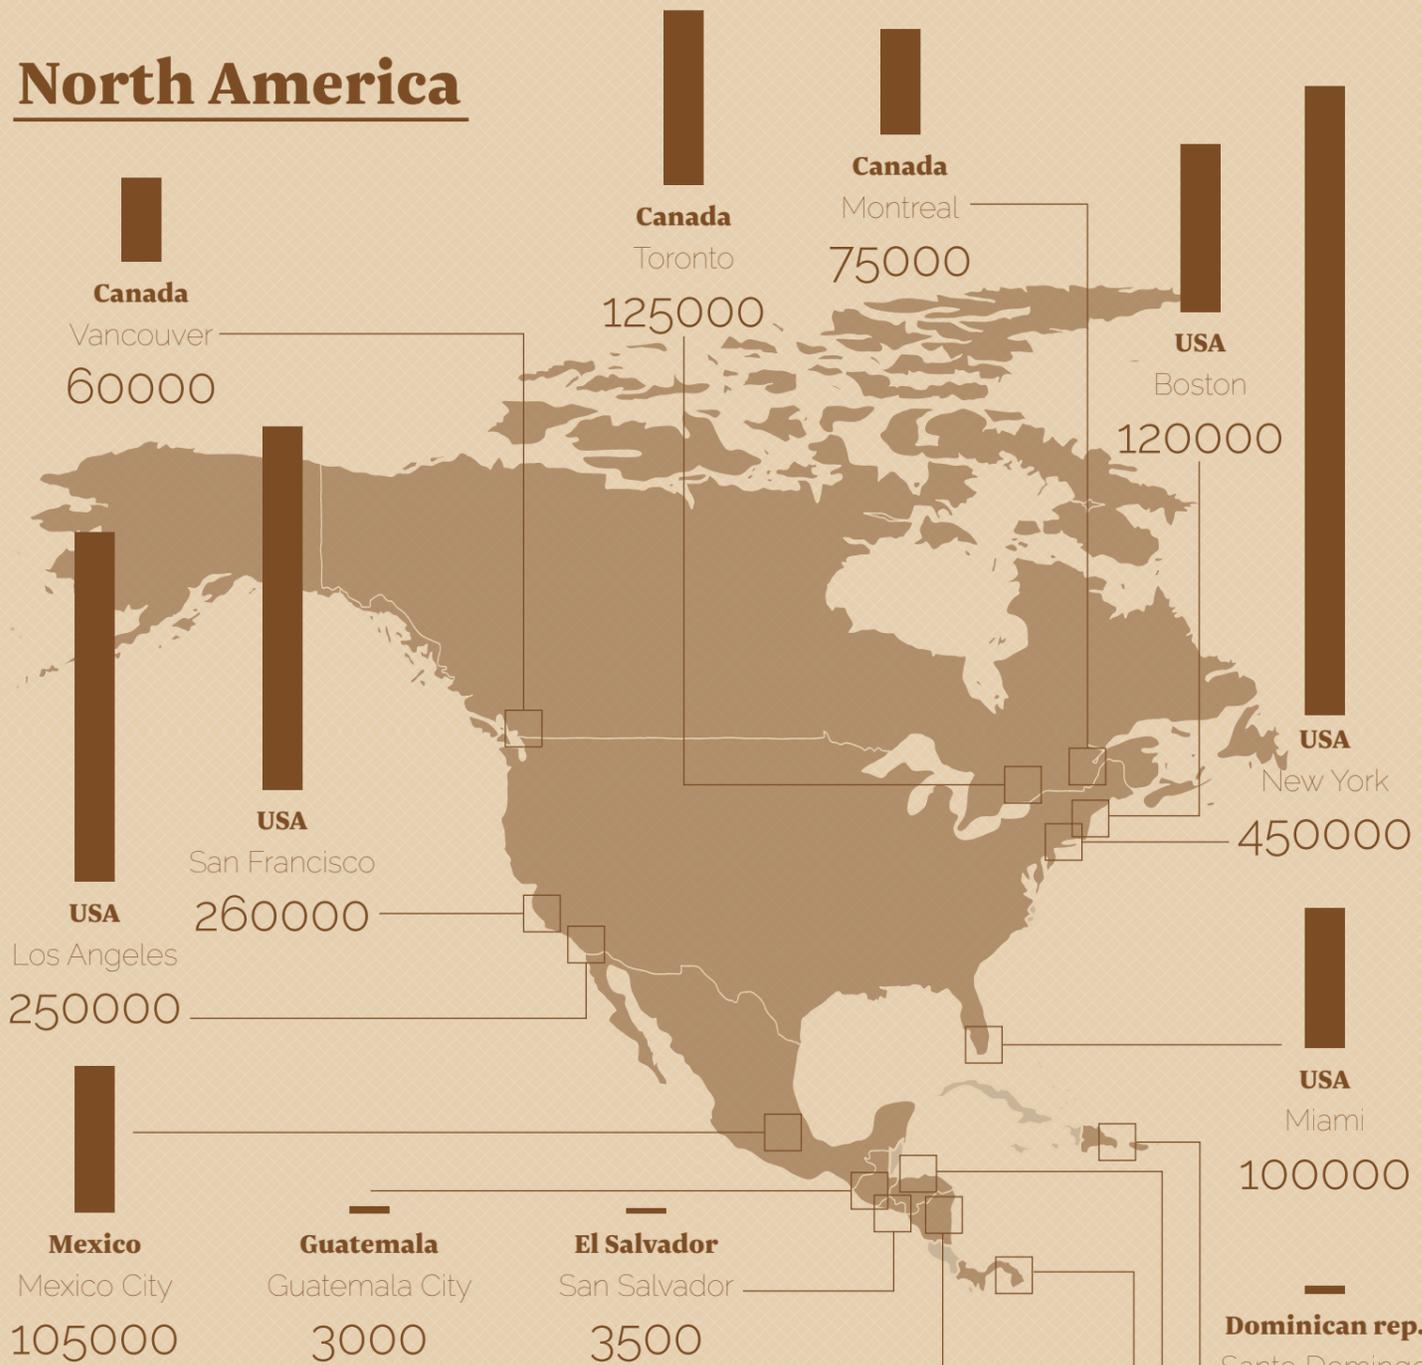

What's interesting is that many of those cities are highly worked by the industry, while others fly below the radar. The "reasons to migrate" section should highlight markets that have potential. Today, much of the demand is filled by mainland China, but some countries put quotas on certain nations and want to see more diversity. Furthermore, competitive advantage can be gained quite easily by becoming a pioneer in a certain market. If you have the means, now might be the right time to diversify.

Focus on the US EB-5

The EB-5's rise to power has been fast; the demand has grown tenfold in five years. The year 2015 saw demand surpass the 10,000 benchmark for visas attributed. The demand exploded with the suspension or semi-suspension (Quebec IIP is still operating) of the Canadian Immigrant Investor program, which redirected the flow of Chinese looking to relocate to North America to the US. The EB-5 cast a wider scope by being less expensive and by not being limited to experienced business owners. Mainland Chinese have comprised roughly 90% of the demand in recent years, and since the number of visas provided under the program has reached the 10,000 benchmark, the extra applications from China will create a backlog (because the number of applications has greatly exceeded the 700 attributed seats). This backlog has piled up and is prolonging the processing time to an estimated six years before applicants receive a conditional Green Card. From that point, it will take another five years for a Chinese investor to get a proper Green Card, bringing the timeframe from application to permanent residency to 11 years. The reality is that it's highly unlikely that this situation will persist, for the following reasons:

01. Demand from China will drop significantly and only start picking up when processing times drop back to acceptable levels. Of course, this will create significant headaches for everyone involved.

2. Serious efforts are being made by industry actors to pressure Congress into making adjustments in the number of visas attributed. If those changes come into force, the backlog could disappear.

03. The ISICIS could hire more personnel to process applications in anticipation of the growing demand and reduce general processing times back to the expected minimum, and therefore potentially reduce by half the time spent in processing the backlog.

4. The EB-5 program could become more expensive and reduce demand.

5. The Canadian and Quebec programs are bound to come back to life. Whether the Federal venture capitalist program is scratched or not, Quebec has been looking to revamp its program the last two years. The delay was mainly because of the federal government and uncertainty over the fate of the Conservative government and its pilot program. With Liberals now in power in both Quebec and nationally, expect a much more immigrant-friendly policy. In hindsight, these problems and solutions should have been apparent a few years ago when demand was growing and the present was taking form. The American product is not the best one in the market and probably the worst in fiscal terms for UHNWI individuals, but it's by far the cheapest of the big five English-speaking countries.

Reasons to Migrate table

The number of millionaires tells us about the potential market size, which can vary according to many factors. A war would see the share of the population looking to relocate rise, while overall improved living conditions in a country will see that percentage fall.

We look at the reasons for looking abroad in specific cities, but it's important to understand that those reasons are based on generalizations: not everyone hates the cold or likes to travel. These are in comparison to what is deemed accessible in today's world. For example, Sao Paulo's universities might be better than most of the world's universities, but they may fall short of the standards at western countries. It's important to know those reasons to better market your product by offering the right incentives. To illustrate: in countries ravaged by crime, you might say: "Come live in the safety of Canada, where people don't bother locking their doors." Furthermore, when certain countries start becoming increasingly unstable, you have to be able to help individuals relocate fast by getting in contact with the resources in place. Facilitate access to programs with processing times less than 2 months. Making money by saving lives is not a terrible thing.

What's new

AUSTRALIA

As if AUD5M wasn't enough, Australia decided to launch the Premium Investor at AUD15M. Based on the same principle as the UK tier 1 investor 5M and 10M option, you can increase your investment amount to reduce your conditional years before permanent residency. You don't have any physical presence requirement to qualify for the PR, and fewer conditions at application. In all honesty, it's not a bad scheme at all, if you have that type of liquidity. It's much more advantageous than the Significant investor at AUD5M, which you need to hold for 4 years.

CANADA

In October 2015, the Conservative government of Steven Harper was defeated by the Liberal Party of Justin Trudeau, putting an end to two successive mandates of Conservative leadership. This put a question mark after the federal venture capitalist program introduced in 2015 to replace the Federal Immigrant Investor program, after 2-3 years of supposed reflection. Quebec has been waiting for the new government to come in and take a position on the issue in order to revamp its own Entrepreneur and Investor program. In 2016, the federal government put forward plans to repeal Bill C-24. One consequence of that would be a return to 3 years in 4 of required residency to be eligible for citizenship. We also expect processing times to be reduced by the new Liberal government.

HONG KONG

The Capital Investment Scheme was a very popular program in the industry and arguably one of the most successful. But Hong Kong decided to suspend the program in 2015 to focus on talent and entrepreneurs. Many of those who previously would have applied to the CIES now apply to the Entrepreneur program, which forces an active investment. Frankly, the main reason to settle in Hong Kong is its status as a business mecca, and active investment is the most natural thing to do there. With historically low interest rates worldwide, passive investment schemes are less and less popular for governments. The CIES might not return for a while, specially since it was mostly used by Mainland Chinese to bypass the closed current.

ST LUCIA

St Lucia launched a Citizenship by Investment program in 2016. The program will be less expensive than the St Kitts & Nevis CBI, but more expensive than Dominica's. St Lucia, like St Kitts & Nevis enable visa-free travel to Europe and the UK. The main difference is that St Lucia levies income tax, unlike St Kitts & Nevis; the rate can reach 30% of personal income. Therefore, it's competing more with Grenada and Dominica. The Real Estate option has yet to be awarded to a promoter.

US EB-5

On June 3, 2015, Senators Patrick Leahy of Vermont

and Chuck Grassley of Iowa introduced a bill in the U.S. Senate to reauthorize and improve the regional center part of the Employment-Based Fifth Preference (EB-5) green card program. The 79-page bill (S. 1501) would extend the EB-5 program for five years and make several changes to the program. S. 1501 would also increase the minimum investment amount to $800,000 for investments in a TEA and $1.2 million for investments not in a TEA.

UK

In 2015, the minimum investment for the Tier 1 Investor visa was raised from £1,000,000 to £2,000,000. At the same time, Chancellor George Osborne pledged to restrict the non-domicile rule that enabled certain residents to be taxed on only what they remit from their offshore income. The non-domicile rule attracted many of the world's richest people and helped make London the global city it is today. The new rules will try to end the generational entitlement and cut to 15 years in 20 the length that the special tax treatment can be used. The new rule takes effect in April 2017. Expect some wealthy individuals to depart to the Crown dependencies, Monaco and Ireland.

VANUATU

After close to 2 decades since its irregular citizenship by investment program, the islands of Vanuatu made a comeback in 2013 – first with the Capital Investment Immigration Plan that was suspended after a year, and now with the Vanuatu Economic Rehabilitation Program, which aims to raise funds to repair damage caused by Hurricane Pam. A Vanuatu passport enables visa-free travel to Europe and the UK and doesn't levy any income tax. The program has an advantage in that it is cheaper and the country is safer than St Kitts. The drawback is its location: unless you're Australian or doing business between Australia and the Americas, you don't really have any reason to choose it over the Caribbean passports.

Program Timeline

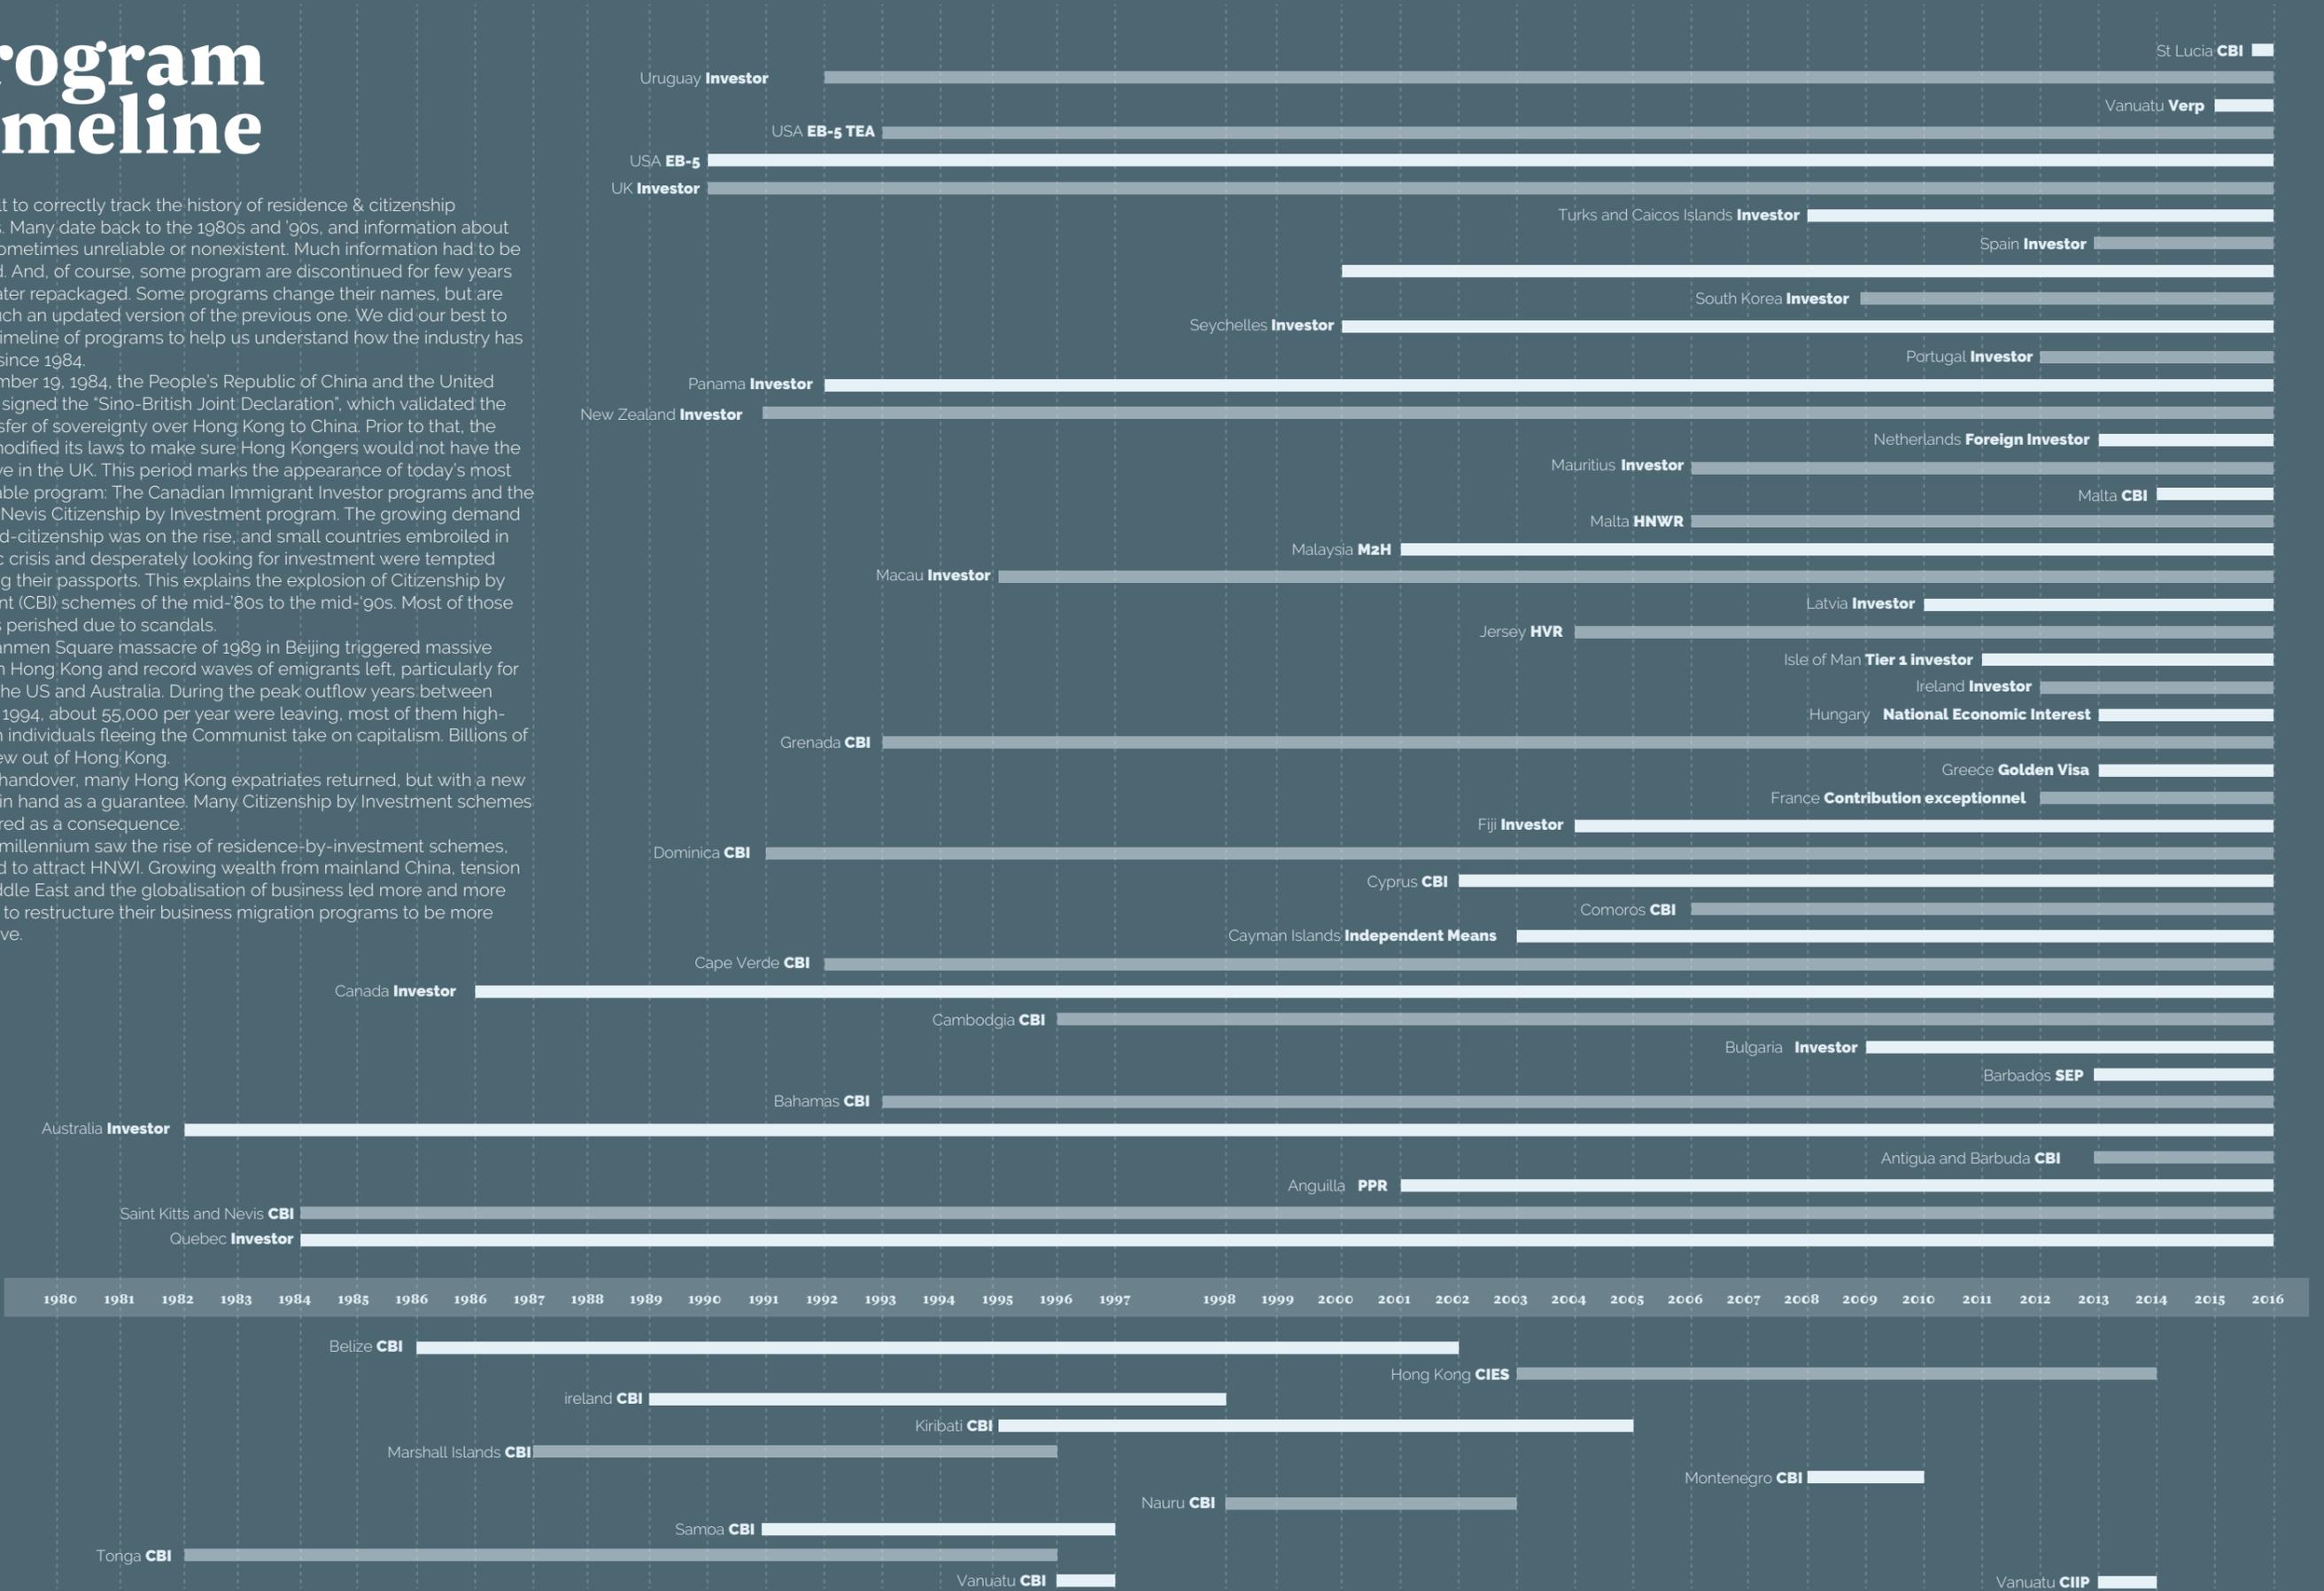

It's difficult to correctly track the history of residence & citizenship programs. Many date back to the 1980s and '90s, and information about them is sometimes unreliable or nonexistent. Much information had to be discarded. And, of course, some programs are discontinued for few years and are later repackaged. Some programs change their names, but are pretty much an updated version of the previous one. We did our best to create a timeline of programs to help us understand how the industry has involved since 1984.

On December 19, 1984, the People's Republic of China and the United Kingdom signed the "Sino-British Joint Declaration", which validated the 1997 transfer of sovereignty over Hong Kong to China. Prior to that, the UK had modified its laws to make sure Hong Kongers would not have the right to live in the UK. This period marks the appearance of today's most recognizable program: The Canadian Immigrant Investor programs and the St Kitts & Nevis Citizenship by Investment program. The growing demand for second-citizenship was on the rise, and small countries embroiled in economic crisis and desperately looking for investment were tempted into selling their passports. This explains the explosion of Citizenship by Investment (CBI) schemes of the mid-'80s to the mid-'90s. Most of those programs perished due to scandals.

The Tiananmen Square massacre of 1989 in Beijing triggered massive hysteria in Hong Kong and record waves of emigrants left, particularly for Canada, the US and Australia. During the peak outflow years between 1988 and 1994, about 55,000 per year were leaving, most of them high-net-worth individuals fleeing the Communist take on capitalism. Billions of dollars flew out of Hong Kong.

After the handover, many Hong Kong expatriates returned, but with a new passport in hand as a guarantee. Many Citizenship by Investment schemes disappeared as a consequence.

The new millennium saw the rise of residence-by-investment schemes, structured to attract HNWI. Growing wealth from mainland China, tension in the Middle East and the globalisation of business led more and more countries to restructure their business migration programs to be more competitive.

Focus on Dakhla

This segment focus on an new destination, mostly unknown to industry professionals: Dakhla. Situated on the western coast of Africa, Dakhla is a city in Western Sahara, a semi-autonomous part of Morocco. The city is situated on a narrow peninsula with beaches on each sides and is becoming a touristic destination. What makes this city on center of attention is that the Moroccan government doesn't levy any taxes in Western Sahara at least until 2020 and Dakhla appears to be the most liveable place in the that territory. The climate is the best imaginable with daytime temperature between 20 and 30 degrees all year long and less than 20 days of rain out of 365. The city has its own airport and daily flights are cheap. Residence is easily obtained via the Moroccan government by showing at least 600usd a month of revenue for sustenance.

Program Stats

This section looks at the acceptance of business immigrants in selected programs in the last 5 years. Some programs were created recently, therefore we only have data from their year of creation. Unfortunately, some programs either don't publish the information or don't do it annually. In some cases, we had to estimate based either on quotas or annual government budgets. Not all programs are a success:

Argentina's Investor program didn't accept a single applicant between 2010 and 2013. The Netherlands Foreign Investor hasn't picked up yet, either. Others, like Austria, Brazil, Ireland and Finland punch way below their weight. This usually means that they offer low payouts for referrals or none at all. In addition, some either think too highly of their country or simply do not consider the competition. Many programs saw steady growth in demand before plummeting, usually because of amendments to the program (e.g., the UK demand dropped by more than 80%). Many programs have shown great success in the last few years, such as the Hong Kong CIES, Malaysia my2home, the USA EB-5, and the Quebec IIP. Even the Portuguese Golden Residence came in with a bang when it launched in 2014. Malta's Individual Investor Programme has been solid and the BVI has undercut all the other Caribbean nations when it comes to setting up a business. Quebec is processing the most applications in the industry right now and has granted more than 5000 Certificates of Selection in 2015. This is well over the 1750 quota on new applications in effect right now, as it's trying to deplete its backlog. Unfortunately many still have to wait, as only 1425 Permanent Residency were given to Quebec's investors by the Federal government for that same year. The US EB-5 has been tapping its 10,000 visas limit in the past few years; that number includes applicants and their families. Applications are piling up and creating a serious backlog that quietly whispers: "Canada Immigrant Investor program!"

Focus on UK Tier 1 Investor

This is a program that has become one of my personal favorite in recent years, I view it as a "high class program". It's not the most popular, it doesn't offer more than others and its quite rather expensive. But, if you have the means, this should be your first program on your list. The program caters to high rollers and the more money you have the better service you will get. The program offers the Super Premium Service for 7000Pd, a service enabling 24h processing time of your application if you are impatient to wait 3-4 weeks for the regular processing time. You start with a 5-year conditional residency but with no real obligation to satisfy as your money is invested. You can reduce that time by investing more money for a lower period of time (much more money). What's interesting is that you don't need to become a tax resident to maintain residency. You have to be present 180 days a year to be eligible for permanent residency, but the tax residency can click at 183 days a year. London is possibly the best place to have access to international business people from all around the world and a key destination to grow your wealth. You have access to the best of everything, albeit at a high cost, but then again if you have the means why look elsewhere? After your Permanent Residence you could apply to the non-domicile tax scheme if the bulk of your wealth is generated elsewhere and live happily ever-after. If your client is worth north of $25M and still looking to grow his wealth, London and Tier 1 Investor (they go hand-in-hand) should be your first suggestion.
